STUDIO THEATRE LAUNCHES VIRTUAL "PSALM'S SALONS AT STUDIO" WITH DC-BASED DIRECTOR, THEATRE-MAKER, ARTIST-IN-RESIDENCE PSALMAYENE 24

Studio Theatre, in collaboration with Studio Artist-in-Residence Psalmayene 24, is launching a three-part series of digital dance parties with conversation—Psalm's Salons at Studio—beginning June 25 at 5 p.m. The virtual salons are an online gathering space to highlight the work of Black creatives, signal boost local and Black-owned businesses, kick back to live music, and promote a sense of community. Salons will be hosted by Psalmayene 24 with original music from DJ Nick tha 1da, sampling from the Library of Congress's Citizen DJ tool, and a rotating panel of guests. Events in the series are free to view and will be streamed live on Studio Theatre's Facebook and YouTube pages.

The first guest on Psalm's Salons is playwright James Ijames. The Philadelphia-based, Studio-commissioned artist was last in DC for a reading of his play-in-development, Good Bones, for the Theatre's Studio R&D: Works in Process series. The two Black theatre artists will discuss their careers, artistic inspirations, and the role of theatre during this moment of racial unrest. During the rapid-fire Q&A Top 5, Psalm will ask James about his favorite theatre productions, before opening the forum to audience questions. Cocktail recipes and recommendations for local food to enjoy during the salon will be shared on Studio's social media prior to the event so that audience members can join in on the interactive party vibe.

"When we cancelled our production of Antoinette Nwandu's Pass Over that Psalm directed, we had to cut off a conversation before it even got started," said Studio's Artistic Director David Muse. "As we've reflected together on what space Studio can make to connect in this time of social distancing, Psalm's instinct was that what we need now is to dance, to be together even separately, and to celebrate art and music from some great Black artists. So we'll be inviting people over to our YouTube channel to dance, listen, celebrate, and learn."

"I'm thrilled to be partnering with Studio Theatre for this online salon series during this critical moment in American history. The original intention was to do the salons live at Studio and then have a dance party after each conversation. When the pandemic hit, we obviously had to pivot. While the platform is different, the goal is still the same: brilliant guests, a strong sense of community, and a celebratory vibe. I can't wait to share this experience with Studio's audience," said Psalmayene 24.

Upcoming Psalm's Salons are:

- Thursday, June 25 at 5 p.m. with guest, playwright James Ijames
- Thursday, July 23 at 5 p.m. (guest TBA)
- Thursday, August 20 at 5 p.m. (guest TBA)

Psalm's Salons are supported by a capacity building grant from the Doris Duke Charitable Foundation's (DDCF) Building Demand for the Arts program. The program funds artists and arts institutions working to forge long-lasting relationships with diverse audiences. Studio, working with Psalm, has committed to expand on its efforts to forge meaningful connections with African American millennial audiences in DC. The grant funds engagement efforts through the 2020-2021 season.

DDCF's Building Demand for the Arts program supports organizations and artists in joint efforts to ignite interest and engagement in jazz, theatre, and contemporary dance. This program is predicated on the beliefs that artists are key connectors to communities, and that artists and organizations can work together in imaginative new ways to attract and engage audiences. These grants also promote deeper partnerships, longer relationships, and new kinds of conversation and cooperation between organizations and artists.
